AUTHOR: EASTWOOD'S IWO JIMA MOVIE IS A 'MASTERPIECE'

■ 'Flags of Our Fathers' to open even as work continues on second film

By PAUL MILLER

IT'S NOT unusual for an someone who writes a best-selling book to end up disavowing the movie made from it.

But that's certainly not the case with Clint Eastwood's new film, "Flags of Our Fathers," which will have its Hollywood premiere Oct. 9 and open on 1,800 screens nationwide 11 days later. Eastwood directed the movie for Warner Bros. and DreamWorks SKG.

"The film is a masterpiece, and Mr. Eastwood has gone beyond my book to capture the essence of a very important historical event," said James Bradley, who attended a special screening at Warner Bros. Studios in Burbank last week and visited shooting locations in Iceland and Chicago last fall. "It's a masterful job of direction, how he put the movie together. I expected perfection and that's what I got."

It was an image that changed the course of World War II, and now Clint Eastwood has recreated the flag raising on Mt. Suribachi (above) for his new movie, "Flags of Our Fathers," based on the book by James Bradley. In Iceland last year, Eastwood directed an invasion scene (lower left).

Bradley's 2000 book, "Flags of Our Fathers," tells the story of the iconic flag raising on Iwo Jima at the height of World War II's bloodiest battle.

Bradley's father, Navy corpsman John Bradley, was one of the young soldiers who helped raise the Stars and Stripes on Mt. Suribachi in February 1945.

"It was the bravest and most decorated month in the history of the United States, with more Medals of Honor and Navy Crosses awarded than anywhere else," Bradley observed. There were 5,391 American soldiers killed on Iwo Jima, along with more than 22,000 Japanese.

But Bradley's book is not just a combat story. It's a highly personal tale of six young men snatched from their ordinary lives, thrown into a maelstrom of combat and then, because of a single photograph, catapulted to national superstardom they didn't feel they deserved more than any of the other soldiers who fought Imperial Japan. It's also a story of the price paid for their courage by the families they left behind.

"On behalf of myself and the families of the other flag raisers, I want to say that we're so proud that these heroes have been brought to life," Bradley said. "It was very emotional for me to write the book, so of course I had tears streaming down my face when I watched the film."

High anticipation

At 76, Eastwood's has seen his tenure as Carmel's mayor in the 1980s start to fade from memory — even for tourists. A new book about the history of Carmel, part of the "Images of America" series, mentions him on only one page. These days, he is best known locally as co-owner of the Pebble Beach Company and for his support, along with his wife, Dina, of numerous local charities. (This week, they'll receive the Distinguished Trustee Award from the Community Foundation for Monterey County.)

In Hollywood, however, Eastwood is at the peak of his career — not as the action-movie star of the gritty Westerns and Dirty Harry films of decades gone by, but as a director. Three years ago, his "Mystic River" picked up seven Oscar nominations. In 2005, he won Best Director and Best Picture for "Million Dollar Baby."

But Eastwood doesn't brag. While he was shooting the boxing picture, which starred Morgan Freeman and Hilary Swank, he referred to it as a "modest little film."

This week, with his work on the movie finished, he was equally understated about "Flags of Our Fathers."

"It looks pretty good," he told The Pine Cone.

And how did co-producer Steven Spielberg react when he saw the finished product?

"I think he liked it," Eastwood said.

A New York Times reporter wasn't as restrained.

"On credentials alone, a presumptive front runner [for next year's Oscars] has to be Clint Eastwood's 'Flags of Our Fathers'," wrote David Halbfinger last week. He noted that, besides Eastwood's and Spielberg's Hollywood successes, the screenplay for "Flags" is by Paul Haggis, who wrote the screenplay for "Million Dollar

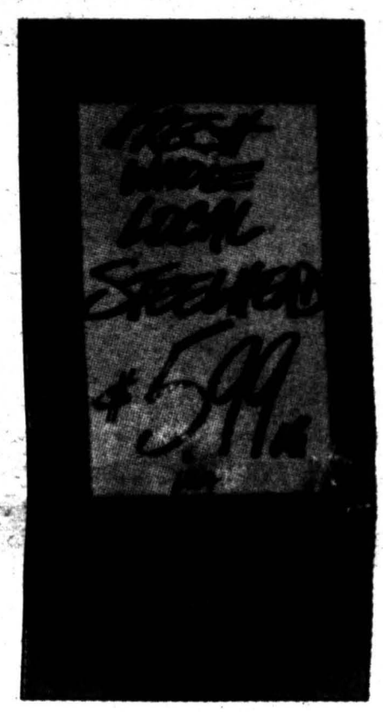
Steelhead trout: Endangered fish or tasty filet?

By CHRIS COUNTS

STEELHEAD TROUT in Monterey County are designated a "threatened species" by the federal government, placing severe restrictions on local water users, making it impossible to build a new dam and costing ratepayers millions of dollars — perhaps hundreds of millions — to limit pumping from the Carmel River. It's also a federal offense to kill one.



Yet in Seattle, Wash., vendors at the Pike Place Market hawk steelhead for $5.99 a pound.

How is it that a particular fish can be endangered and staunchly protected in one part of the country, and a tasty fish fillet somewhere else in the same time zone? Perhaps a better question is: Are steelhead trout truly in danger of extinction?

The answer is no. Wildlife officials admit the Carmel River steelhead isn't a "threatened species." It's a threatened local population of a fish that exists in hundreds of rivers and streams along nearly the entire coast of North America.

In other words, the fish you're not allowed to kill in the Carmel River are the same ones for sale in Seattle fish markets.

"They're the same species, but for management purposes, we divide them into distinct populations," explained Dick

Oldest restaurant to close Saturday

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MOST OF the people who eat in Fred and Cecilia Fozounmayeh's Pernille Restaurant at San Carlos and Sixth don't even read the menu before placing their orders.

And in the 43 years they've owned the restaurant, the couple have seen people who first dined there as children grow up to become parents and grandparents.

But the restaurant fans describe as a Carmel institution will close its doors Sept. 30.

The Fozounmayehs' lease expired in January, but they continued renting the property. While dealing with a $1,000 increase for a monthly rent of about $8,~~000~~, Fozounmayeh said he learned the building is slated for development and will soon no longer accommodate a restaurant.

The landlord, Leidig-Draper Properties, about which Fozounmayeh has no complaints, offered to let him stay on until the building is under construction. But considering it wouldn't be for long, and with the higher rent, "We thought, 'OK this is the time to go'," he said.

His first concern was his 14 employees, but with his connections in the community, he obtained new restaurant jobs for almost all of them.

"But my chef after 43 years — I think he's going to retire,"

Historic preservation list loses four more houses, keeps one

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CITY'S consultant said the one-story, flat-roofed house built in 1940 should be protected as an historic resource because it "utilizes modern materials and prefabrication building techniques" and was designed by an architect, Jon Konigshofer, well known for his economical construction methods.

A consultant hired by property owners James and Kathleen Smart tried to persuade the historic resources board otherwise during a Sept. 18 hearing.

Meta Bunse agreed Konigshofer was known for economical designs and affordable housing, and "was noted for some more adventurous designs in the area," she said. But the Smarts' house "was not one of them."

The city's consultant, Rick Janick, linked Konigshofer with more than 150 buildings on the Monterey Peninsula, including at least 50 Pebble Beach homes. In Carmel, five of his designs, including some in the Sand and Sea complex on San Antonio Avenue, are on the historic list.

HRB member Erik Dyar argued the house should be saved. "Modernism and the Bay Area Tradition are certainly historically significant and are recognized by the state, and the nation and the world, basically," he said.

But board member Erling Lagerholm said the house struck him as "ordinary," and not particularly significant.

Chair Julie Wendt described Konigshofer as a handsome man with a pencil-thin mustache who liked to spend time at the Lodge at Pebble Beach and did some work for Bing Crosby. She suggested a third historian study the designer's importance to break the tie.

But, while the board could order another study, senior planner Sean Conroy said its job is to "make a determination based on the information we have." On a 4-1 vote, the HRB decided to keep the Smarts' house, located on Seventh Avenue between Forest and the city limit, on the historic list.

Not the neighbors

The HRB voted to remove an 80-plus-year-old Casanova Street house from the historic inventory after learning consultant Kent Seavey apparently based his report on the neighbor's property file.

"I hope you can grant my appeal, because he used the wrong source of information," said Lada Kratky, adding that her home was condemned by the county health department three months after she bought it. "If he were to write it again, it would be totally different."

Seavey apparently confused Kratky's home with the one next door when he referred to a building permit from 1940, an owner named Ester Jones and builder Harvey Braunton. He wrote, "The house affords an opportunity for research into the possible changing social nature of residential design in Carmel between the roaring '20s and World War II."

Although the original building permit was lost, Kratky said city maps indicate her house was built sometime around 1924, well before Seavey's date.

"The primary basis for designation ... was that the residence was a [1940s] example of residential design in the city," Conroy said in his staff report. "This is inaccurate."

With the city council deciding last week to grant two appeals because of faulty reports, board member Paul Coss said Kratky's should also be granted because Seavey's "damaged" study "seems to be a mess."

Three more can go

In consecutive unanimous votes, the board also decided to remove from the historic list three properties preservation consultants had identified as a "good representative example of the pronounced taste for individualism and creativity," an "unaltered example of the post-World War II design work" of architect Edwin Snyder, and "an example of Modern design and craftsmanship."

Rod and Sibyl Johnson's Guadalupe Street house is not a good example of vernacular architecture because it does not represent a particular style, according to Conroy. Regarding its "individualism," the city's more famous houses, such as Hugh Comstock's fairy-tale designs, the Bark House and

NASA astronaut, lots of jets, vintage aircraft promise thrills

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AGILE JETS flown through complex maneuvers in tight formation. Daredevil pilots seeming to defy the laws of physics in their custom-built aircraft. A NASA astronaut with more than 14 million space miles and three Shuttle missions under his belt. A jet-powered car that reaches 400 mph in eight seconds. These acts, as well as other sky-high entertainers and numerous displays on the ground, should please the crowds at the 26th annual California International Airshow in Salinas Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

"Our mission is to put on the very, very best airshow we can, all by volunteers, and then give all the proceeds to charity," said executive director Harry Wardwell, who works for Rabobank in Salinas when he's not talking about a production nationally recognized as "one of the best organized community-based airshows, and one of the largest charitable airshows, in the country." (Each year, about 450 civilian and military airshows are held in the United States.)

The airshow has given more than $6.3 million to charities during the past quarter century, according to Wardwell, and about 700 volunteers ensure the event goes off right.

"The airshow is a fun event. When those military jets come into town, it's pretty exciting, and people get to meet some of the best pilots," Wardwell said. "Aviation is fascinating to lots of people."

While it lacks the big-name Blue Angels or Thunderbirds, this weekend will feature an awesome lineup. Aerobatic pilot and Salinas native Sean D. Tucker will show off his skills in his Oracle Challenger, as will Mike Goulian in his brand new, custom-built Extra EA-330SHP. Comedian Kent Pietsch and his 1942 Interstate Cadet are nationally known for crazy stunts, such as landing on top of RVs.

Those needing their military flight fix will get it with the U.S. Marines Harrier Jump Jet, the USAF's F-15 Eagle and F-16 Viper, and the Navy's F/A-18 Super Hornet.

New this year, the Patriots Aerobatic Jet Team — which comprises a former Russian MiG pilot, a pair of USAF Thunderbirds and an Alaskan bush pilot — will demonstrate the maneuverability of their single-engine L-39s, the agile Czechoslovakian-built aircraft used abroad for training air forces.

And the Texan West aerial demonstration team, which represents the USAF Air Education and Training Command and pilots T-6A Texans, will dispand after its farewll performance this weekend.

On the ground, the USAF Smoke-N-Thunder Jet Car should wow audiences as well as earn publicity for a card-writing campaign to benefit hospitalized soldiers.

Among the aircraft displayed on the tarmac, and vendors selling all sorts of treats and memorabilia, will be the NASA/Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital exhibit featuring Space Shuttle astronaut Steve Robinson, who performed three spacewalks, including an unprecedented emergency repair of the Shuttle's heat shield during last year's mission. He will chat with airshow guests all weekend.

Gates at the Salinas airport will open at 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, with flying commencing at 11 a.m. General admission will run $17 for adults, $13 for children and free for kids under 6. Grandstand seats available for additional fees. Fans might also check participating Shell stations for a coupon good for a child's admission with the purchase of an adult ticket.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Birds dining illegally at downtown restaurant

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to reported sewage spill on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. Emergency personnel discovered a sewage spill involving raw sewage on private property and liquid sewage in the street and entering the storm drain. Dolores Command was established and the liquid was immediately stopped from any further intrusion into the storm drain. Proper notifications were made, including county health and public works. The restaurant was ordered to stop water use until further notice. Additional absorbent was brought to the scene and applied to appropriate areas. County health and city decided how to neutralize the spill and a licensed contractor arrived to resolve a clog that contributed to the problem. The clog could not be opened, but there was no further intrusion in the street, so the spill was neutralized and flushed. Units returned to station. Contractor called to advise that the clog had been opened and the hazard on the private property was being properly resolved.

Big Sur: A Carmel resident reported someone attempted to open a gate to her Palo Colorado Road property at approximately 0107 hours. She did not see who it was but asked for documentation.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 10

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Lost front plate. Reporting party came to Carmel Police Department to report past-tense loss of her vehicle's front license plate. The exact location of the loss is unknown. Report taken and CLETS (California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System) entry made regarding lost plate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Sewage leak on Lincoln Street. Contact was made with a lessee of a residence in regards to a blocked sewage line located on the property. The lessee called the property management firm overseeing the residence. Carmel Fire Department responded for a washdown of the public easement. No further action warranted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Repossessed vehicle on San Carlos Street. Report of vehicle repossession from National Auto Recovery Bureau, Inc. in Salinas. Received confirmation by fax on Sept. 12. CLETS entry made.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to a vehicle accident at Riata and Vinadero/Alvarado at 0225 hours. A damaged vehicle with airbag deployment was discovered, but there was no patient. Ambulance returned to the station.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to reported sewage leak in the area of Monte Verde and Fourth. At scene. Investigation found a small leak from the residential cleanout. Resident contacted, advised to have a plumber respond, and contacted county health. Health department advised firefighters to spray a hypochlorite solution over the leak. Both units available returned to station.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A female walked into the fire station with a small laceration to her right hand. She stated she had been bitten by a dog. Cleaned and bandaged the wound and advised her to seek care from a physician. She wished to go to the emergency room on her own. She signed a medical release form and had her husband drive her to CHOMP. All units available in station.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to mutual aid request from Westmed for a medical emergency on Carmelo Street for a female patient who overdosed on medication. Patient transported to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to a mutual aid request from Westmed for a medical emergency on Rancho San Carlos Road for a female patient who experienced a seizure. Patient transported to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to mutual aid request from Westmed for a male patient at Monterey High School complaining of neck pain. Patient transported to CHOMP.

Pebble Beach: A female resident called 911 to report an argument with her husband. Deputies determined the husband had violated his probation and subsequently arrested him for

Butler, an official with the National Marine Fisheries Service.

These distinct populations, Butler explained, have adapted to specific conditions unique to their habitats. As a consequence, the populations have developed genetic traits. For instance, due to habitat factors, adults from one region will leave the ocean and enter swim upriver earlier than adults from another region.

'We're trying to protect genetic diversity' a federal wildlife official says

The distinctions between the isolated population groups offer steelhead a better chance of survival as a species.

"What we're trying to do is protect genetic diversity," said Butler, explaining why distinct populations are guarded by his agency. "Genetic diversity gives than an opportunity to adapt to changing conditions. It gives them a better chance to survive."

Different status in different rivers

According to the National Marine Fisheries Service, there are 15 different steelhead "population segments" ranging from the Canadian border to Southern California. The term "population segments" might sound a bit academic, but it's a big improvement over the term it recently replaced, "evolutionary significant units."

Although steelhead are commonly considered "endangered," the only officially designated endangered population exists in Southern California.

"Malibu Creek was thought to be the end of their range, but now they're turning up even farther south," Butler said.

Nine different geographical regions are represented in the "threatened category," including three separate segments of the Columbia River, the Snake River Basin, the Upper Willamette River, Northern California, Central California, South-Central California and the California Central Valley. The Puget Sound, currently designated "proposed threatened," may soon be added to the list. All these fish, as well as rainbow trout found in lakes and streams throughout the United States and in many parts of the world, are the same species, Oncorhynchus mykiss.

Who's in charge?

So what's the difference between "endangered" and "threatened"? And how does the U.S. government get jurisdiction over a local population of such a plentiful species?

According to the Endangered Species Act, "endangered" describes any species that is in danger of extinction throughout all or part of its range, while "threatened" refers to any species that is likely to become an endangered species within the foreseeable future. While the difference between the two designations is simply a matter of degree, both population segments are afforded similar protection under the law.

The Oregon Coast steelhead have been designated a "species of concern," although "population segment of concern" would be a more accurate term. Like the Puget Sound steelhead, Oregon Coast steelhead are likely to be designated "threatened in the near future," Butler said.

That leaves just three population segments as "not warranted" for protection. It is likely the Pike Place fillets came from one of these segments, which include the Klamath Mountain Province, Southwest Washington and the Olympic Peninsula. Steelhead populations also exist along the west coast of Canada, Alaska and the Kamchatka Peninsula in Asia.

The fish are also very common in Canada and have been introduced in more than 50 countries for sport and commercial aquaculture. In some parts of the world, they are considered an invasive species.

Send in the feds

Butler said population segments of steelhead typically become listed after a private party raises a concern.

"Often, an outside entity will petition that a species be listed," he explained. "We do a status review, which paints a picture of the species' present condition. Then we'll assess what the threats are to the species."

Steelhead activists point to statistics as evidence of a declining local steelhead population. The California Advisory Committee on Salmon and Steelhead in 1988 estimated 20,000 steelhead existed in the Carmel River in 1928. The California Department of Fish and Game reported about 1,500 steelhead lived in the Carmel River in 1965. By the droughts of the early 1990s, several studies suggested only several hundred fish survived.

But the worldwide population is at least several hundred million, according to scientific literature.

CAN SENIOR WOMEN IMPROVE RETIREMENT OUTLOOK?

If you are a senior woman, you need to manage your financial resources to enjoy what could be a very long retirement. After all, women reaching age 65 have an average life expectancy of 19.8 years, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. So, whether you're married, single, divorced or widowed, you need to take action.

Put in as much as you can possibly afford to your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored plan.

Be aware of wills, trusts and beneficiary designations. If you are married, make sure you know what legal arrangements have been made for you to receive financial assets from your husband should you outlive him.

And to help identify your retirement planning goals and choose the right mix of investments to meet those goals, you may want to work with a financial professional.

Your financial future is in your hands - so get a good grip on it.

Great Strides dinner raises $50K to fight cystic fibrosis

By MARY BROWNFIELD

'AN EVENING in Tuscany" — a dinner and auction held in a Carmel Valley home last week and attended by about 100 people — raised $50,000 for Great Strides to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, according to organizer Elizabeth Robinson. Great Strides is presenting a walk/run to raise more funds for the CFF Sept. 30.

For the Robinsons, the effort to find a cure for cystic fibrosis — a potentially fatal disease that affects the lungs and pancreas — is personal. Their youngest daughter, Abby, now 8 and thriving, was 3 months old when the disease almost killed her.

To raise money to fight the illness and inform people about it, Elizabeth Robinson began holding walks at Tularcitos Elementary School in the Village. This year, she expanded the effort to include the Peninsula by forming a local Great Strides chapter.

Last Tuesday night's dinner and auction constituted the chapter's first major fundraising effort.

"I'm breathless. What an amazing community we live in!" Robinson exclaimed following the event. The live auction featured autographed memorabilia donated by Clint and Dina Eastwood, and an antique necklace from Yemen contributed by Robinson and her husband, Glenn, while the silent auction included art, sports memorabilia given by famous athletes, dinners, wines and getaways.

Chefs from Monterey Peninsula Country Club and Michael's Catering donated the food, and tenor Erasmo Aiello accompanied Mike Marotta, Jr. and his band.

Abby also presided over a small sale called "Crafting a Cure" that featured scarfs, T-shirts, jewelry and pot holders made by her and her family. She sold most of them.

"We are truly blessed," Robinson said.

She credited board members Tricia Dally, Veronika Doyle and Chris Pappageorgas — whose two children were diagnosed with CF in their teens — with bringing the event together. "Chris and I have a personal stake in this fight — I'm humbled and awed by our friends, who jumped right in and worked so hard because they know Abby and because they care," Robinson said.

She plans to carry on the success of An Evening in Tuscany during the Sept. 30 Great Strides walk/run in Monterey in which teams raise money for the CFF.

"I am stunned at the success of An Evening in Tuscany and deeply grateful to all of the people who worked so hard to make it wonderful," Robinson said.

Gateway Center also wants to take you to Italy

IF YOU missed out on the Tuscany-themed fundraiser for cystic fibrosis last week but are still dreaming of chianti and pasta, the Pasadera Country Club on Highway 68 will host "An Evening in Tuscany" Saturday, Oct. 1, from 5 to 10 p.m. This event will benefit the Gateway Center of Monterey County.

Local pianist Michael Martinez will provide the music while guests dine on an Italian buffet and enjoy wine from some of the area's finest vintners. A raffle, silent auction and live auction will follow, highlighted by a wide range of prizes, including golf packages, spa packages, lodging at local resorts and dinners at local restaurants.

The Gateway Center of Monterey County has been teaching life skills to developmentally disabled adults since 1963. In addition to operating a senior day center in Salinas, the nonprofit group provides a home in Pacific Grove for about 50 developmentally disabled residents.

"Our clients are real warm and caring people," explained Anne Meyer, development executive for the Gateway Center. "They volunteer in their community and they always have smiles on their faces. They're a joy to be around."

Gateway residents also face real challenges that require community support.

"They're real people just like you and I," Meyer said. "They shouldn't be forgotten."

Tickets to the event are $150 person in advance and $160 at the door. For more information, call (831) 372-8002, ext. 1.

"WHAT'S GOOD FOR CARMEL BUSINESS IS GOOD FOR CARMEL!

Carmel's Premier Travel Website – www.carmelcalifornia.org

Chamber members have a lot to be excited about in their Chamber website which introduces their businesses to an average of 20,000 unique users each month. Over 1/4 of the internet users type in some version of Chamber when using a search engine. The ability to optimize search engines is just one of the many chamber membership benefits.

According to one of the dozens of reports that the sophisticated website can generate, the top 10 things website visitors are looking for are lodging, attractions, dining/food, wineries, tours/travel/recreation, cultural offerings, vacation rentals, shopping, real estate and wedding information. The chamber website attracts international as well as national visitors; the countries besides the USA most represented in website users are Great Britain, Canada, and Germany.

The chamber website is linked to the chamber's membership data base. When a new member joins or a member changes their phone # or other information, it's automatically changed on the website. The chamber website calendar automatically sends event reminders to those who sign up for that feature and new events are added to the web calendar daily.

Chamber members can access reports that tell them how many times their listing has been displayed, how many times their url has been clicked on, how much traffic they have had in the last week, month, and year. An e-commerce page sells apparel, maps, and relocation packets and allows visitors to order a free Guide to Carmel. The site has banner ads at all levels as well as listing enhancement (yellow boxes) and our staff regularly changes ads and the featured events.

$100K grant to be spent for cop, programs

STATE TAXPAYERS provided another $100,000 in Citizens Option for Public Safety grant funds to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and the city council earlier this month approved the police department's plans for spending it.

As it has for the past four years, the council OK'd using the bulk of the grant, $75,890, for a full-time contract police officer position, which reduces overtime and supports traffic enforcement duties when possible, according to CPD.

A little of the money, $3,300, will cover stipend pay for Cpl. Steve Rana, who often patrols on the department's BMW motorcycle. The balance of $20,810 will support volunteer and reserve officers programs, as well as other crime-prevention programs and specialized enforcement projects at CPD. "This grant is extremely important to the department, so we can continue the level of law enforcement we provide," Sgt. John Nyunt told the council Sept. 12.

"This doesn't look like a tough call, does it?" asked councilman Mike Cunningham, who is known for carefully scrutinizing the spending of tax dollars. "There's not a lot of controversy."

With assurance there wasn't, he and the rest of the council voted to OK the spending plan for the COPS grant. Any dollars unspent by June 30, 2008, would have to be returned to the state.

Early residents Frank and Jane Powers, who promoted Carmel as a naturelover's and artist's paradise, at one time held title to 1,600 lots in town.

For new Tuarcitos principal, CUSD is land of plenty

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BRENDA BARCELLOS is still growing used to getting what she asks for. As the new principal of Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley, she now works for the Carmel Unified School District, which has more resources and lacks the financial woes of her former employer, Monterey Peninsula Unified.

"This is a place where the sky's the limit," Barcellos said she told her staff and faculty soon after coming to work at Tularcitos this summer. "We can do whatever we need or want to do to benefit the children."

She previously worked as the principal of Walter Colton for three years, during which budget cuts necessitated it be reconfigured from a middle school to serve grades kindergarten through eighth.

There, and before that as an assistant principal in the Clovis Unified School District, she grew accustomed to being told programs couldn't be operated and materials couldn't be purchased due to lack of funds.

"Now, I'm encouraged that I can do it," she said. "It's a major paradigm shift."

She's giddy with the ability to "implement some programs with a high level of standards that really weren't possible at the other districts I worked in," she said, including a community garden and an art program. "It's great, but it makes me feel bad for the other districts."

It's not only the strong financial footing and supportive administration that make her so happy with her new job.

HOLLY CRIST, 12, almost 13, is a wirehaired fox terrier currently cooling off in Carmel-by-the-Sea after a grueling summer in Palm Springs.

Holly lives with her Mom Cheryl and Dad Chris in that chicest of resort cities where a temperature of 126 degrees fahrenheit is not unheard of. Needless to say, refreshing Carmel Beach is Holly's first destination when she hits town.

While vacationing here for a month, Holly enjoys being taken for walks by Mom and Dad, and is indulged three to four times a day. She likes the Scenic Road walking path where she meets and greets other dogs, particularly Sammy, a corgi. When they spot each other, their tails start wagging immediately. She enjoys happy hour at the Cypress Inn, too.

Back in Palm Springs, the Crist family lives across the street from the late William Powell's residence. Powell, of course, was known for his 'Thin Man' movie series in which Asta, a wirehaired fox terrier, was featured. Holly is a welcome guest at the Powell home whenever she cares to visit.

Among Holly's fave things: Riding in the family car with French music playing on cassette; eating Alaskan Salmon Bites treats; frolicking with next door neighbors Zena, a dachshund, and pugs Cleo and Daisy; and 'all squeaky toys," according to Mom. Holly's special favorite, from a whole basketful of toys, is a cloth squeaky frog.

Sweet tempered and smart, Holly follows instructions perfectly, according to Dad, and when it's bedtime, Holly toddles off dutifully to her own bed in Mom and Dad's room – or sometimes to their comfy chaise longue.

of the interview process, the warmth of the staff and the community and the students came through so clearly," she said. "They are compassionate people who are so passionate about what's best for the kids that they're willing to do amazing things. I know a lot of teachers, and they give a lot. The difference at Tularcitos is the way they give, with such warmth and generosity."

She said people in all positions "do their jobs at a very high level of ability and integrity."

Life calling

Born and raised in the San Joaquin Valley, Barcellos knew early on she wanted to work with kids.

"I loved the whole idea of being involved in the lives of children and all that encompasses," she said, particularly academics. She savored understanding how they learn to read and write, and discovering what interests and inspires them.

Her first teaching job was in a rural school, where she taught all elementary and middle school grade levels over the course of a dozen years. From there, she went to Clovis to become a vice principal, and the MPUSD job was her first as a principal.

"I was keeping my eye on Carmel. I knew about Carmel and that I wanted to be part of the team here," said Barcellos, who lives in Monterey with her 11-year-old son and 13-year-old daughter.

Until former principal Kim Williams announced he would retire this year, there were no jobs for principals available. "I thank Kim Williams for retiring and opening the door for me to apply," Barcellos said. "I was just thrilled to be offered the position."

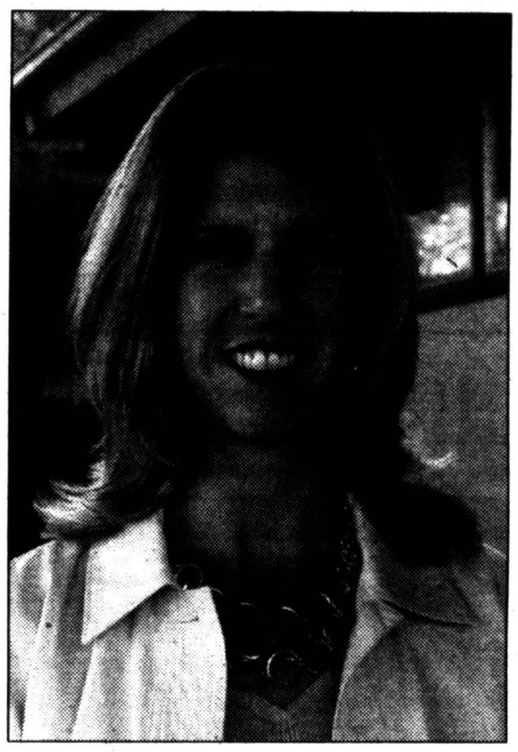
Before he left Tularcitos, Williams told The Pine Cone he had heard great things about his replacement from her MPUSD coworkers. "She comes very highly recommended and has a wonderful reputation," he said.

Her hiring followed substantial research and screening, according to Williams. CUSD Superintendent Marvin Biasotti interviewed teachers, staff and parents on the characteristics the district should look for in the new principal, and a team of school employees, parents and administrators interviewed candidates.

Barcellos acknowledged Williams is a tough act to follow, including his offering up his pride and appearance to motivate kids during the annual Read-a-Thons. Blue hair, a crazy haircut and a giant chicken suit followed the annual reading contests, as he kept his promises to the kids.

"I heard of the wonderful things Kim did," Barcellos said, so she told the parent-teacher organization she would step up as well, even if it means sitting in a dunk tank.

"I said, 'Let me know what it's going to be, and we'll make it happen,'" she said. "Whatever it takes, I'm willing to do it."



Brenda Barcellos is thrilled with her new job as principal of Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley, even if it means getting dunked.

Carmel reads The Pine Cone

Ada A. Heim

December 17, 1914 ~ September 23, 2006

PEBBLE BEACH – Ada A. Heim passed away on September 23, 2006, and spent her last days surrounded by her loved ones. She was 91. Born in Evansville, Indiana, Ada moved her mother and siblings to California in the late 1930's. Ada became a cosmetologist and eventually opened her own salon in Santa Monica, California. Ada relocated to Silicon Valley in the late 70's where she retired. Her hobbies were gardening, crossword puzzles, reading, knitting, crocheting, various needle crafts, and doll making. Ada's greatest joy was spending time with her grandchildren and family, whom all lovingly called her "Nana." She loved the Monterey Peninsula and enjoyed living in Pebble Beach in her final years with her granddaughter's family.

Ada leaves behind her beloved daughter, Barbara Sogg (& husband, Edgar Sogg); grandchildren, Barbara Considine-Turner (& husband, Vernon Turner), Lesli Guggenheim (& husband, Charles Guggenheim), and Edgar Sogg, Jr.; great-grandchildren, Sean Considine (& wife, Kayleen Considine), Scott Considine (& wife, Madeline Considine), Gregory Guggenheim, Macey Sogg, and Valerie Sogg; great-great-grandchildren, Kylie Considine and Scott Considine, Jr.; sisters, Christina Kramer and Agnes Inglott; and brother, Jake Geiser. She will be deeply missed by all.

Ada now joins her previously deceased husband, Fred Heim; grandson, Loren Sogg; mother, Enid Geiser; and brother, Benjamin Geiser, in the Meadow of Blue Daisies.

A private family memorial will be held. Sincere thanks goes to Dr. Harry Knaster, Hospice of the Central Coast, and Westland House. Arrangements are under the direction of The Paul Mortuary.

A week of jazz, folk and rock, from Monterey to Big Sur

ELAINE LUCIA, who performs this Saturday at the KRML Jazz and Blues Company, has earned a reputation among sidemen as a "musician's singer," a vocalist with an eclectic song list and her own unique arrangements and interpretations. And her many and varied musical endeavors have begun to pay dividends lately, earning her wider recognition and more engagements.

Her debut CD, "Elaine Lucia ... Sings Jazz and Other Things," was released nationally in the spring of 2001 by Raw Records. It received substantial air play on more than 150 jazz stations and garnered excellent reviews. In February 2002, she premiered "Lucia Sings Lee," a tribute to the late, great Peggy Lee, at the renowned Plush Room in San Francisco. Complete with vintage costumes and a chronological sequence of Ms. Lee's greatest hits from the 1940s to the 1960s, Lucia's performance landed her a gig as headliner at the 2002 Tahoe Jazz Festival. She performs regularly with her jazz quartet in the Bay Area, and she recently released her latest CD, "A Sonny Day," a tribute to her late father, Frank "Sonny" Lucia, who greatly influenced and supported her musical career.

A member of the West Coast Songwriters Association, she performs regularly as a singer/songwriter in addition to her jazz shows and is currently recording a vocal/guitar project of all original tunes. Her quartet is composed of pianist Jonathan Alford, bassist Pierre Archain, drummer Alan Hall, and guitarist Gary Vogensen. Saturday's concert starts at 7:30 p.m. Call (831) 624-6432 for reservations.

Appearing at Sly McFly's on Sunday, Oct. 1, Peter Tork and James Lee Stanley have been good friends since the early 1960s. Performing together under the moniker Two Man Band, Tork and Stanley play acoustic rock 'n' roll originals and throw in a few covers for good measure. Tork, a former member of the world famous 1960s pop group, the Monkees, still occasionally tours with his former bandmates and plays in a variety of other groups, including his latest project, Shoe Suede Blues. A proficient musician, Tork was the only Monkee to play his own instruments on the group's early albums.

James Lee Stanley, Tork's collaborator of choice, is a self-described "freelance human being" and has released 20 albums of original music during a lengthy solo career. Tom Robbins, author of "Even Cowgirls Gets the Blues," calls Stanley "the last great undiscovered singer-songwriter in the world." Check out his music and you can begin to understand why.

The concert starts at 8:30 p.m. Call (831) 649-8050 for reservations and more information.

On Sunday, Oct. 8, Carmel native Rushad Eggleston returns to the Monterey area to perform at the Big Sur River Inn with his latest group, Crooked Still. An alternative bluegrass group that bends the boundaries of traditional music, Crooked Still comprises four unique musical personalities. Vocalist Aoife O'Donovan's refined, sultry vocals float over Eggleston's rumbling cello riffs, Dr. Gregory Liszt's futuristic four-finger banjo rolls and Corey DiMario's pulsing bass lines.

Based out of Boston, Mass., where Eggleston graduated from the Berklee College of Music, Crooked Still is a staple on the Northeast acoustic music circuit and is now beginning to branch out. A trip to the North American Folk Alliance in 2004 resulted in invitations to perform at the Falcon Ridge Folk Festival and historic Newport Folk Festival. "Hop High," the bands debut album, was released at the prestigious Falcon Ridge festival in July 2004 and was the top-selling CD at the festival that year. Following the success of this first festival appearance, Crooked Still has appeared at concert halls, nightclubs, coffeehouses, and festivals in 23 and several different countries.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

The quartet was recently signed to a record deal with Signature Sounds Recording, a progressive independent label whose roster includes an eclectic collection of talent, including indie-rocker Josh Ritter and old-time folk jam band The Mammals. Music starts at 1:30 p.m. Call (831) 667-2700 for details.

The 13th Annual Seafood Festival is scheduled for the weekend of Saturday Sept. 30 to Oct. 1 and will feature three bands per day performing on the main stage at the Custom House Plaza.

In addition to seafood, arts and crafts, and other assorted vendors, the festival will feature performances by perennial local favorites John "Broadway" Tucker, The Chicano All Stars, The Tony Miles Band, Coco Beat, Along Came Betty plus Bay Area rock 'n' roll band Five AM. The music starts at 11 a.m.

The 49th Monterey Jazz Festival Presented by Verizon was the 14th consecutive MJF booked by general manager Tim Jackson and I guess it is safe to say (tongue firmly in cheek) that Jackson, knows what he is doing.

PacRep concludes Shakespeare festival with sexual comedy

CONTINUING a 96-year tradition of Shakespeare at the Outdoor Forest Theater, PacRep concludes its Carmel Shakespeare Festival Sept. 29 through Oct. 15 with the bawdy romp, "Measure for Measure," directed by John Farmanesh-Bocca (director of "A Midsummer Nights Dream") who has been active with the Carmel Shake-speare Festival and PacRep for more than a decade. The wicked comedy, unbearably raw and strangely tender, asks why justice and mercy are so rarely found together, while sex and leadership never seem to get out of bed. Appearing in the cast of "Measure for Measure" are PacRep resident actress Julie Hughett (recently voted Best Actor in Monterey County), and equity actors Michael Navarra, Michael Jacobs and David Mendelsohn. Also appearing in supporting roles are MaryAnn Schaupp-Rousseau, Clayton Froning, Sally Clawson, D. Scott McQuiston and Ron Cohen, among others.

"Measure" begins with one discounted preview Sept. 29 at 7:30 p.m, opens Saturday, Sept. 30, at 7:30 p.m., and continues Friday through Sunday evenings at 7:30 p.m., through Oct. 15. All performances are at the Outdoor Forest Theater.

General admission is $15 to $30 for adults, $8 to $25 for seniors/students and $6 for children under 12. For tickets, call (831) 622-0100 or order online at www.pacrep.org or www.ticketguys.com.

In what was one of the festival's finest lineups in recent years (or in the 30 years I have been attending, for that matter), numerous memorable moments stood out, including performances by jazz legends Dave Brubeck, Oscar Peterson, McCoy Tyner, Dianne Reeves and Charles Lloyd.

Jackson's coaxing of Brubeck to compose a tribute to Steinbeck's Cannery Row (the coaxing was conveyed on stage by the jazz legend himself prior to his performance) was a masterful idea and helped set the tone for a weekend of legends, reunions and cutting-edge jazz that Monterey Jazz Festival participants have come to expect year after year.

Attendance records were broken, and main-stage concerts were consistently filled with riveting performances by headliners joined by the likes of young lion Roy Hargrove and vocalist Kurt Elling.

Performances at Dizzy's Den, the Garden Stage, the Night Club and the Starbucks Coffee House Gallery all featured a significant number of the main-stage artists and were accented by a steady stream of promising new artists, including vocalists Sasha Dobson and Tierney Sutton plus young pianist Taylor Eigisti. Charles Lloyd, the persona of jazz cool, returning to the scene of one his finest performances, created another Monterey magical evening, an evening that will forever be etched in my musical memory bank and has me wondering what Jackson possibly can do for a 50th anniversary encore.

Galante open house marks harvest season in the vineyards

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

THE CAREFULLY tended grapes are practically bursting with the concentrated essence of a long, hot summer, and as Monterey County's vintners prepare to reap their hard-won bounty, it's time for Galante Vineyards to swing open its doors and caves for its annual Harvest Open House.

"It's a casual afternoon of fun that attracts a lot of local folks," said owner Jack Galante. "The gathering is great for tasting new wines, connecting with neighbors in the community and best of all, it's free."

The Harvest Open House, Oct. 7, combines wine, hors d'oeuvres and music. This year, Jack's 16-year old son's rock band, Way Out West, will perform.

As of our conversation, Jack estimated the pinot noir harvest would begin Oct. 2, so there should be plenty of activity taking place on the property for open house attendees to see.

"I don't know if we'll be pressing or fermenting grapes, but picking will have begun and it's a great opportunity for people to see what happens during harvest," he said.

Aside from sampling Galante Vineyard's estate wines, Jack is excited to release his very first vintage of petite sirah, a unique grape originally from the Rhône River Valley in France.

"It's a delightful wine with violet characteristics on the nose and a rich mouth feel," he said, clearly very pleased with his first vintage.

Typically a blending grape, more and more local winemakers, such as Annette Hoff of Cima Collina, are experimenting with petite sirah with robust results. Her 2004 Newell Vineyard Petite Sirah is absolutely lovely.

The Galante open house is also an opportunity to for curious wine enthusiasts and Galante Vineyards fans to meet the winemaker, Greg Vita, and vineyard manager, Eliud Ortiz. Vita has more than 14 years' experience in winemaking in California, including 12 years at Spring Mountain.

While at Spring Mountain he custom-crushed wine for Frog's Leap, Chimney Rock, Dunn Vineyards and others. Ortiz came to California from Guatemala in 1982. He has a degree in electronics but no formal agricultural training. He started working for Galante as a ranch hand in 1984 and is now a key part of the winemaking team.

And of course Jack and his partner, Dawn, will be ready to have some fun with guests.

The Galante Family purchased the rustic and remote 700-acre property located in Cachagua Valley as a cattle ranch when Jack was a years old. They planted wine grapes on 60 acres, specializing in Cabernet Sauvignon as a means to make the ranch financially viable. In 1993, Jack decided to build a winery and use some of his grapes to produce ultra-premium estate bottled wines.

In addition to the vineyards, winery and cattle, Galante is also one of the largest growers of fresh cut field roses in the state.

The details: The Harvest Open House takes place Oct. 7 from 1 to 5 p.m. at Galante Vineyards, 18181 Cachagua Road, Carmel Valley. Free. To RSVP (very important!), please call (800) GALANTE. For more information about Galante Vineyards or directions, visit www.galantevineyards.com. Guests will receive a 10 percent discount on all current release wine purchases the day of the event.

Montrio launches 'Half-Price Wine Night'

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

MONDAYS AT Montrio have been part of my weekly dining routine for as long as I have lived on the Monterey Peninsula.

But starting this Sunday, that is going to change. No, I'm not breaking off my weekly dine-at-the-bar habit, but as of Oct. 1, Montrio is slashing prices on its already competitively priced wine list. Except for 25 "allocated" wines on the extensive list, Sunday customers will get a 50 percent discount.

Chef Tony Baker's imaginative menu plus half-priced wine? You do the math. Instead of my usual $18 half bottle of King Estate Pinot Gris, I can upgrade and swing a full-sized bottle without retail remorse. Spontaneous meals can become special occasions!

Kathy Solley, general manager and wine coordinator at Montrio, says, "This is one way that Montrio can say a big, 'Thank you,' and show locals how much we appreciate their business." Montrio also plans to relaunch its "Dinner and a Movie Night" starting in early November. This promotion, which runs Sunday through Thursday, includes a multi-course meal and a movie ticket to a flick at the Osio. Time it right with "Half-Price Wine Night" on Sunday and you've got yourself a mighty fine night on the town without breaking the bank!

Montrio, which has won Wine Spectator's Award of Excellence for nine years running and landed an Award of Distinction from Wine Enthusiast, has more than 160 bottles on its wine list, with approximately 80 percent of its selections from California, and nearly half of those from Monterey County. For information and reservations, please call (831) 658-8880 or visit www.montrio.com.

La Dolce Vita's Chef Melendez took his career one step at a time

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

chef profile

LA DOLCE Vita, a picturesque Italian restaurant, is off the beaten path in Carmel-by-the-Sea. "Off the beaten path" in our little town translates, in this case, to two blocks south of Ocean Avenue, the village's bustling main street.

But if visitors venture past Nielsen Bros. Market at San Carlos and Seventh and look across the street to La Dolce Vita's colorful outdoor terrace above Wittpenn's Antiques, "That's all it takes. People discover us, come in and then come back for more," according to Chef Miguel Melendez.

Situated in Stonehouse Terrace, one of the most beautiful recessed enclaves in this town of appealing courtyards and cul-de-sacs, La Dolce Vita is unique.

Branches of tall pines overhang the second floor terrace, while flowers, tall bushes and trees line the walkway leading to its entrance. Italian music, lightly playing on the restaurant's sound system, and appetizing aromas greet customers when they discover La Dolce Vita.

Chef Melendez, who came to the Monterey Peninsula from El Salvador in 1991 when he was a teenager, spoke no English but took two to three periods of English a day at Monterey High School as well as a regular academic program from grades nine through 12, graduating after four years.

During his high school years, he worked as a bus boy at Marie Callender's in Monterey, his first restaurant experience. By the time he graduated, he had a good working knowledge of what goes on in front of and behind the scenes in a restaurant.

As for cooking, he feels he is 90 percent self-taught; and 10 percent schooled at Monterey Peninsula College. He also read gourmet cooking magazines, watched chefs on television such as Julia Child, and really started tasting food for its ingredients.

By then, speaking English and being particularly presentable, he scored front-of-the-house employment with the Pebble Beach Company at The Beach and Tennis Club restaurant. He did his job well, learned it thoroughly and asked to be in the kitchen a few days a week to watch the preparation of food. "It gave me the chance to try something new," he said.

By this time, he felt his work was no longer challenging and decided "to take it to the next level." When the former owners closed La Dolce Vita in 2002, Melendez stepped in and in less than a month had the restaurant up and running again.

While he does most of the cooking, Chef Melendez has two other cooks on his staff. "I do about 50 percent in the kitchen, and 50 percent greeting my customers and seating them," he said. In this way, he has come to know his clientele well and welcomes regulars back personally. He has learned their likes and dislikes over the years and prepares special desserts not on the menu for local customers on request.

During the summer, on Tuesdays and Fridays, he books in groups of day-trippers who arrive in Carmel by bus for a day of sightseeing and shopping. He prepares prix fixe three-course luncheons for these groups

Pick Monterey County's best Merlot

THE VARIETAL unkindly and unjustly maligned by a jerk in the hugely popular "Sideways" a few years back will enjoy the spotlight at A Taste of Monterey's People's Choice Merlot Challenge Saturday, Oct. 7, at 7 p.m. in Monterey.

Attendees will taste 18 different Merlots — all cultivated by Monterey County wineries — and vote on their favorite, which will be unmasked and hailed as the people's choice. "Help us determine what the people like," tasting room staff implore. "You're the judge."

In addition, drawings will be held for six-packs of assorted Merlots.

Admission to the People's Choice Merlot Challenge will run $20 for A Taste of Monterey club members, and $25 for all others. The event will he held in the tasting room located at 700 Cannery Row in Monterey, one block from the Aquarium. For reservations, call (831) 751-1980 ext. 10.

who sometimes number as many as 55.

Starting in October, La Dolce Vita will provide room service to guests of The Coachman's Inn located directly across San Carlos Street.

The dining room seats 35 and the terrace another 35. On sunny days, umbrellas are unfurled on the terrace, and on cooler days, heat lamps provide added comfort.

The all-Italian menu lists nine appetizers, five soups and salads, 15 entrees of meat, fowl and fish, and 22 pasta dishes. Five pizzas are also offered and several Italian desserts are all made on the premises. A wine list, ranging in price from $17 to $200 per bottle, is made up of Italian and California wines. Wines by the glass are also featured.

From a large family, Melendez' parents are still in El Salvador, as are three sisters and four brothers, while he has two sisters and one brother in the United States. A father himself, Chef Melendez has two daughters, 1-year-old Cailley, and 2-year-old Beyonce.

Sandwiched in between his daily work as a restaurateur and family life, Melendez is soccer coach in mid afternoon for the junior varsity at Carmel High School.

La Dolce Vita is open for lunch and dinner seven days a week, with luncheon served from 11 a.m. and dinner from 5 p.m. For reservations, call (831) 624-3667.

MARSHALL PERMADI HYDORN

February 3, 1982 - September 24, 2006

Marshall was born at Community Hospital in Monterey, lived in Carmel, and graduated from Carmel High School in 2000. After graduation, he moved to Las Vegas where he lived with his mother, and attended University of Nevada at Las Vegas. In 2004 he married the love of his life, Sarah Stephens Permadi. Sarah preceded him in death in August 2006. Marshall's father, Nico Permadi, is deceased. Marshall is survived by his mother, Nicole Hydorn, his stepfather Gary Duren, sisters Chelsea Thayer and Isabella Duren, grand parents Marshall and Diane Hydorn, aunts Kirsten, Noelle, Allison, Tracy, Dana, Becka, and Kim; and Uncles Marshall, Colin, Tim, Jon, and Michael. His cousins who so loved and cared for him are Prissy, Maddie, T.J., Tyler, Alexandra, Cappy, Ava, Audrey, Claudia, Emma, and Hanna. We will never forget our beloved Marshall, and his sweet smile, and gentle spirit.

Funeral services will be held in Las Vegas, and a family memorial service will be held in Carmel. Contributions may be made to a favorite charity, or to the International Campaign for Tibet, P.O. Box 910, Oxon Hill MD, 20750-0970. Marshall was a great admirer of the Buddhist Tradition.

Dorotha Kilpatrick Powers

Dorotha Kilpatrick Powers died August 26, 2006 at her home in Carmel. She was born December 27, 1919 in Walnut Springs, Texas, and grew up in Breckenridge, Texas. During the 1940's she worked for several years at Fort Hood in telephone communications.

Dorotha married November 2, 1946 and as an Army wife dedicated herself to family, charitable work, and teaching interests. Students of the 1960's-1970's years at Junipero Serra Grammar School may remember her. Dorotha was gracious and helping to any person with needs or troubles.

Mrs. Powers is survived by her husband of fifty-nine years, Colonel John F. Powers, and four sons, Michael (Melissa), David, Stephen (Barbara), and Daniel (Catherine). She was preceded in death by a son, John and by a daughter, Kathleen. Other immediate family members surviving her are sixteen grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

As Dorotha wished, no funeral ceremonies were scheduled.

he added.

Fozounmayeh, who moved to the West Coast from Tehran a half century ago, said he gets choked up just thinking about closing the doors of the restaurant he came to work for as a manager in 1959.

When the then-owners decided to sell it five years later, he and Cecilia decided to buy it. At the time, Pernille was one of about eight restaurants in town, compared with almost 10 times that many now, he said.

"The rent was $168 a month," he recalled. "When it went up to $250, I thought the world would end."

Over the decades, Pernille has attracted its devotees, some only visiting once a year because they live across the country or across the world.

"During the last AT&T, I had three generations here. I used to put the dad in a high chair, then the son, and now the son has a little girl," he said. "They've come here every single year for as long as I can remember."

He's worried about how they'll feel when they arrive for the 2007 tournament and find their favorite restaurant gone.

"I'm choked up already," he said.

And then there are those who stop in a few times a week, or every day.

"With 65 percent of my customers, we don't even give them a menu. They know what they want," he said. "So, Saturday the 30th is our last day here, and there will be just a lot of tears, I guess. Most of our customers who come here every day seem to have something in their throats. But what else can we do?"

Fozounmayeh also has long and deep involvement with service groups such as Kiwanis, of which he's been a member for almost 37 years. He recalled serving as president of the Carmel Business Association (now the Carmel Chamber of Commerce) when Clint Eastwood was elected mayor 20 years ago.

"I was interviewed by the BBC. I couldn't believe it," he said. "There was a lot of excitement, and there have been so many things I could put them all in a book."

Married for as long as they've owned the restaurant, the Fozounmayehs have no plans to move out of their Pebble Beach home, but they plan to spend some of their new free time with their three children and four grandchildren, who live in Los Angeles and Concord. They may do some traveling as well, though they've already been all over the world.

"There's no rearview mirror — you can't look back," Fozounmayeh said. "You've got to pick it up and go."

FLAGS

Baby" and co-wrote last year's Best Picture Oscar winner, "Crash."

Numerous other news stories have appeared predicting great things for "Flags," and an enthusiastic fan site, flagsofourfathers.net, has already sprung up, overflowing with enthusiasm for the film's essence and its minutiae. The site profiles the cast and crew, offers extensive essays on the history of Iwo Jima and World War II, hosts a "Pacific War Forum," closely monitors the shooting and post-production schedules, offers tips about the release of the soundtrack and trailers, and stays up to date on the film's PR.

"Scenes from 'Flags of Our Fathers' to be broadcast Oct. 4 at 9:45 p.m. on HBO!" the site trumpeted this week.

The N.Y. Times tried to imbue the film with modern political relevance, describing it as "a study of the callous ways in which heroes are created for public consumption, used and discarded with the news media's willing cooperation."

But Eastwood sees the film in more basic terms.

"I just want the people who see the picture to feel how the story happened, how these skinny kids were affected, and how they were a lot tougher than we are today," he said during filming.

To make sure the audience isn't distracted from the unpretentious backgrounds of the soldiers who conquered Iwo Jima, he stayed away from big-name stars for "Flags of Our Fathers."

"The men who raised the flag were young — very young — and that's why we used actors who are up and coming," Eastwood said.

Ryan Phillipe plays John Bradley, with the other flag raisers portrayed by Adam Beach, Jesse Bradford, Jamie Bell, Ben Walker and Paul Walker.

Two movies at once

Eastwood's interest in the Iwo Jima project began as soon as he read Bradley's book six years ago. He immediately tried to buy the rights, only to learn Spielberg already had them. For two years, the director of "Saving Private Ryan" tried to get a script for "Flags" he liked. Unsatisfied, he put the Iwo Jima story aside in 2003. But Eastwood's interest remained high, and at a party after the 2004 Academy Awards, Eastwood told Spielberg he would like to direct "Flags of Our Fathers." Within a few days, the two Hollywood giants had an agreement.

At the time, Eastwood was in production for "Million Dollar Baby." But when that project was finished in the fall of 2004, and with a screenplay from Haggis for "Flags" he liked, Eastwood soon threw himself into researching the all-out battle for Iwo Jima. He met with veterans of the invasion and read numerous books and personal histories.

He also visited the island in April 2005 to discuss the project with Japanese officials and scout filming locations.

In the process, he became intrigued by the sacrifice of the defenders of Iwo Jima.

"They were dug in everywhere and they had an armada of 880 ships coming at them," Eastwood said.

The Japanese commander, Tadamichi Kuribayashi, sent a series of poignant letters to his family about his inevitable fate.

After reading a special translation of Kuribayashi's correspondence, Eastwood decided to shoot an entirely separate movie telling the story of Iwo Jima from the Japanese perspective. That movie, due out Dec. 9, is called, "Letters from Iwo Jima."

Japanese newspapers published a note from Eastwood this fall, explaining his intentions: "Those who lose their lives in war, on both sides, are fully deserving of honor and respect. These two films are my tribute to them. Through these films that tell the story [of Iwo Jima] from both the U.S. and Japanese sides, I hope that you will be able to see a new perspective on an era that the people of both countries share — and has made a deep impression on their hearts," he wrote.

But, no matter how worthy the project, directing the second Iwo Jima movie presented some unique challenges for him, especially since it is entirely in Japanese.

"The script was in both languages, and I had a couple of translators," Eastwood said. "And if you know what the scene is, and you know what the objectives are, then you just go ahead and do them."

One scene in "Letters" — with a small camera crew and Ken Watanabe, the actor who plays General Kuribayashi — was filmed at the foot of Mt. Suribachi in April.

But the Japanese government put too many restrictions on filming to recreate the flag raising on Iwo Jima itself.

"It's sacred ground for them and, because of the memorial aspect, I couldn't use a bunch of pyrotechnics to show the mayhem the way it really was," Eastwood said after his first visit to the volcanic island.

That led him to decide to shoot the battle sequences for "Flags" and "Letters" in Iceland, where black sand beaches and desolate countryside made a good substitute for a battle-scarred Pacific island.

Other filming was done in New York, Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles.

Eastwood edited the movie earlier this year at his offices at Mission Ranch. Digital effects were added by Digital Domain of Venice Beach. Finally, the audio mix for "Flags" was done at the Warner Bros. dubbing room in Burbank.

"Anything on the sound track you want to accentuate or de-accentuate is done at that time," Eastwood said. "We're doing the biggest battle in Marine Corps history, so it's complicated."

The audio for a war bond rally at Chicago's soldier field was also complex. "You have marching bands and drum rolls — it's hard to explain until you've seen it."

While he's promoting "Flags" and attending the movie's premieres, Eastwood and his crew are working to meet the December deadline for "Letters." It's unprecedented to complete two movies so close together, but Eastwood prides himself on getting his movies finished on time and on budget.

"I started 'Flags' in the first week of August last year, and I delivered it the second week of August this year," he noted. The $90 million production required a little less money than it was supposed to, Eastwood said.

"I think at the Stanford or Berkeley school of business, they should study the CEO skills of Mr. Eastwood," Bradley said. "They would find a superior manager with incredible motivational skills who manages a project on time and on budget."

In a story published Sept. 3, Daily Variety had this to say about Clint Eastwood's work habits:

"One exec who worked on the project acknowledges the challenges [of doing two movies at the same time], but has nothing but admiration for Eastwood. 'He's 76 years old, and he rose to a challenge that most guys couldn't get out of bed to do. And he does it with such ease. He's not worrying about what table he'll get at The Grill.'"

"Flags of Our Fathers" will open at Century Cinemas at Del Monte Center Oct. 20.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Conners, R.N.

ANY ACTIVITY TRANSLATES TO LONGEVITY

It is hardly a secret that people who exercise live longer and feel better. But, does that mean that you have to go to a gym or walk three miles a day? Not necessarily. A six-year study of people between the ages of 70 and 82 years shows that any kind of exercise will extend your life. That includes washing dishes and carrying groceries as well as structured exercise. In fact, using the most exacting measurements to determine levels of physical activity, scientists found that even standing while talking on the phone rater than sitting could be construed as exercise. Of course, the more strenuous the exercise, the longer you live, but every little bit helps.

At VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES, we believe we can make a difference in the lives of the residents and their families and a difference in the lives of those we care for at home. You'll find a caring, dedicated staff, a friendly atmosphere and fun activities. We are affiliated with the National Association of Professional Geriatric Care Managers, American Society of Aging, and California Association for Health Services at Home, California Association of Residential Care Homes and The American Nurses Association.

P.S. Pleasurable activities such as walking the dog may be construed as physical activity that prolongs life.

Meg Parker Conners is an RN and owner of Victorian Health Care Services and Victorian Residential Care Homes. For assistance, call 655-1935.

Thomas W. Wood

Thomas W. Wood died on September 7, 2006 at the age of 97. A long time resident of Carmel, he is survived by his wife of 38 years, Evelyn; two sons, Dr. Thomas W. Wood, Jr., of Livermore, California and Richard H. Wood of Spokane, Washington; as well as four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Tom was a life long educator and served as a counselor at Carmel High School for five years before his retirement. He was a Lieutenant Commander aboard an aircraft carrier in the Pacific during World War II. He was a devoted husband, father and grandfather. He will be greatly missed.

A private memorial will be held at the family home in Carmel. Any memorial donations may be made to the Carmel Foundation in honor of Thomas W. Wood.

HISTORIC

the Ship House, better represent that diversity, he said.

In addition, a bedroom built onto the house in 1943 "is not complementary" to the original house, Dyar said, and the board agreed to remove it from the inventory.

Even under stricter state standards, John Clayton's California Ranch-style house, designed by Snyder and built on Carmelo Street in 1948, is not historically significant, nor is its architect, according to the board.

While the prolific Carl Daniels designed Barry Long's stucco house at Torres and Second in 1940, the house is not a particularly good example of Modern housing in Carmel, the board decided.

In her evaluation of the property, consultant Sheila McElroy said it was, but Conroy disagreed. "Very little information is provided to support this statement or the historical significance of the residence," he wrote.

The board concluded the house displays a mix of styles, and Daniels was not a significant contributor to the development of the city.

Since the city declared in June 2005 it would begin recording historic designation on the deeds of 300 properties, about a third of the owners filed appeals. The board's Sept. 18 actions bring the total number of appeals granted to 29. The HRB has denied 15, but the city council has since overturned seven. Another 23 were closed for inactivity or withdrawn by the property owners, and about 35 remain unresolved.

HOW TO GET MORE FOR YOUR HOME

Commission included, you generally end up with more in your pocket if you sell with a real estate professional than if you sell your home by yourself. You also end up enjoying the experience a great deal more.

A study by the National Association of Realtors® of 2005 home sales discovered that, with no significant differences between the types of homes sold, those homes sold with the assistance of a real estate professional brought in a 16% higher selling price than those sold "by-owner." The median selling price nationally was $230,000 for the homes sold through a real estate professional, and $198,200 for those sold without the help of a professional.

These findings stun even the seasoned real estate professional. It is impossible not to conclude that a sale will most likely prove more profitable if a knowledgeable professional is helping to set the price, to create a marketing program for the home, to negotiate the sale, and to shepherd the transaction to its closing date. SAFER, THE SECOND TIME AROUND

According to a recent study, the second-generation air bags on most vehicles built in 1998 and afterward are safer than their predecessors. Designed to be less hazardous to children and small adults, the newer air bags are indeed safer for young children without putting adults at greater risk. Second-generation air bags include depowered models, which inflate with less force, and advanced air bags. While concerns had been raised that the depowered air bags could be unsafe for larger people, the new study found no trade-off in safety given to large and small passengers. This seems to be a win-win situation, in which improved technology has led to improved safety for all.

As safety technology becomes more advanced, such as second-generation airbags, cars, trucks, and SUVs become safer to drive. We embrace safety and want you to know that you, and your family's safety is our number one concern. We are located at the corner of Figueroa and Franklin, just west of Jack's Park in downtown Monterey.

P.S. Air bags are intended to supplement the use of seat belts, not replace them.

OPINION

Editorial

Enough with the picketing, already

WHEN WORKERS have a legitimate grievance against their employer, there is nothing wrong with them trying to get the public on their side. Picketing, by attracting the attention of passersby and the media, is a very common way to do this. The goal is to convince the public to take their patronage elsewhere, making it painful for the employer to continue doing whatever his employees don't like.

But just because somebody carries a picket sign doesn't mean he has a legitimate gripe. And if the picketing goes on too long, it seems more like harassment than negotiating.

Such it is with the never-ending picketing of DMC job sites by the Carpenters Union. After more than a year of seeing hired protesters (not union members) in Pacific Grove, Seaside, Carmel and the gates to Pebble Beach, the public has long ago gotten the point. Now, they're just getting annoyed, which means the union is doing more harm than good to itself. It's long past time for the pickets to declare victory and go home.

What a real city looks like

DESPITE WHAT its opponents say, the housing project proposed for Carmel Valley's September Ranch isn't "urbanization." Nor will it turn Carmel Valley — as one letter to the editor in the Herald claimed last week — into the San Fernando Valley.

If owner Jim Morgens proposed 1,000 or 5,000 units per acre, he might be guilty of trying to create a new city. But the plan approved by the Monterey County Planning Commission, and which will be considered next week by the board of supervisors, allows him just 95 housing units on 891 acres of land. At the California average of 2.93 people per household, the built-out population density of September Ranch would be just 200 people per square mile

Here are some other average housing densities around the United States:

New York — 23,700 per square mile

San Francisco — 15,500

Los Angeles — 7,400

San Jose — 4,600

Carmel-by-the-Sea — 4,000

In fact, among all housing projects proposed in the Monterey Peninsula in the last 20 years, September Ranch has to be one of the most spacious. Only Rancho San Carlos, with fewer than 400 units on 20,000 acres (about 30 people per square mile) has it beat.

Supervisors may have legitimate concerns about water and traffic impacts of September Ranch. But one thing they don't have to worry about is whether it will bear any resemblance to a metropolis.

Incorporation won't go away

Dear Editor:

Carmel Valley incorporation activists claim they don't necessarily support incorporation, they just want it to go to an election. This seems sincere enough, until one studies the flawed LAFCO process: Once a question is taken to a vote, no matter how soundly it is defeated, it can be presented again every two years indefinitely.

What city proponents really mean is that they want to "Goleta-ize" us. It took eight years and four elections before that community, tired of seeing the same issue on the ballot, passed incorporation by a 3 percent margin. Today, Goleta is a sprawling urban cancer. In Elk Grove, incorporation supporters took six years (three elections) to pass the measure; in the subsequent five years, the city grew from 50,000 to 121,000.

City proponents in Carmel Valley know they will lose the first election, even the second or third. But a loss in this process doesn't mean "no" — it means "we'll see you again in two years, and again, and again if necessary!"

This is why LAFCO should not bend the rules to make it easier for this small group to get on the ballot in the first place. We the people will not tolerate, without legal challenge, LAFCO's built-in bias in favor of incorporation.

Bindel on Old Bath House

Dear Editor:

After all that has been written in The Pine Cone, I felt compelled to write and express my side of the closure of The Old Bath House.

I remodeled and built the building 30 years ago, to the building codes at that time, with my own funds. My staff of 30 and I worked 365 days a year, for 30 years. The City of Pacific Grove, without my knowledge, entered into a ADA lawsuit settlement, which basically put us out of business.

City officials would not work with us for a solution. I quit paying rent to get their attention. In a city that is in a financial mess, you would think someone would know the rent wasn't paid for six months.

In November 2005, after spending a year and more than $100,000 to find a way to meet the ADA requirements, coming up with estimates of more than $2 million, I decided to close our labor of love and give legal notice to the city that I was not interested in continuing the concession agreement with a landlord that has such poor business sense. There was no seizure of assets, no notice to quit, no unlawful detainer action notices. My understanding is the City of Pacific Grove acted in an illegal manner.

I would like to thank all our guests for letting us serve them in those 30 years. I would like to thank the people of the Peninsula for 42 years of patronage of my establishments in Pacific Grove — Cecil's Ice Cream Parlor, Pizza Pub West, The King's Cross Station, The Tinnery, The Grill at Lovers Point and the flag ship, The Old Bath House. I would like to acknowledge the 8,000 people I employed in my Pacific Grove businesses over the years, and I wish the best for them and their families. I would also like to thank the chamber of commerce for its help over the last 42 years.

The right tools

Dear Editor:

Being in the trades, I know the importance of having the right tool for the job. Experience and knowledge can be useless without proper equipment. With that in mind I have been moved to help the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade acquire the right tools for their job.

The BSVFB is an all-volunteer fire department made up of men and women who work and live in Big Sur. They respond to emergency calls along 60 miles of the coast highway and on more than 600 square miles of rugged mountainous terrain — a job made difficult by the area's wild nature. They rely exclusively on private donations to fund their operations.

The Brigade has three stations along the coast. At this time, their extrication rescue equipment consists of only one Jaws of Life, two battery-powered Sawzalls, and one spreader with a power source. Most of this equipment is kept at their Post Ranch Station.

In the event of an accident, response time depends on how far these tools must be transported. They would like to stock all three stations with extrication tools to help ensure quick response times for future rescue situations.

In the terrible accident that took two sons of Carmel in July, the rescuers needed time more than anything else. With the vehicle upside down at the base of a 400-foot cliff, smashed down to the doors, the waves crashing and the tide rising, all the tools in the world may not have made a difference.

Each year it seems that I read about another car going off a cliff along the Big Sur Coast. If ever something like this happens again (and I pray to God that it doesn't), we need to make sure the Brigade has all the rescue equipment that it might need close at hand.

The Brigade is a dedicated team that has trained along with the other agencies of the same kind here on the Peninsula. We are all one community and should help each other both financially and emotionally. Please join me and donate to the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade's rescue equipment fund.

Donations may be sent to: Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade, P.O. Box 520, Big Sur, CA 93920.

Weary of pickets

Dear Editor:

I'm thoroughly tired of the picketers and their signs protesting that the DMC Construction company is unfair to their workers and the community! I am a part of the community and the picketers do not represent me at all.

The men and women propping up the signs do not and have not worked for DMC. It seems they do not speak English and, indeed, hand out slips of paper saying: "I am not authorized and have been told not to speak regarding this hand billing or picketing activity." These people are hired pickets who work for slightly more than the minimum wage, but far less than a carpenter earns per hour. Since they are told not to speak, then let's get the name and phone numbers of the union spokesman out into the light of day. John Anzini is the field representative of Monterey County Carpenters Union Local 605. Mr. Anzini's office is at 751 Neeson Rd., Marina, CA 93933. His phone numbers are (831) 883-1931 and (831) 901-9596.

My understanding is that Pacific Grove contracted with DMC to update the city's golf clubhouse. The DMC bid for the job was significantly less than other bids. Pacific Grove hired an established local business, gave local employees work and saved the City of Pacific Grove a lot of money. Fancy that! As far as I've heard, the city is satisfied with the job DMC did on the clubhouse. Hmmm! Someone needs to explain how this either hurt or did not benefit the community.

I have talked to former employees of DMC. They speak with significant respect about the company and, yes, they would work for them again. I have been able to observe their work on more than one occasion.

I saw the pride that went into creating attractive and safe homes, using a lot of their own sweat labor. I personally know of the courtesy and respect they exhibit toward their neighbors and community.

The Carpenters Union Local 605, which either cannot, will not, does not, or is forbidden to speak is not doing much of a job of representing or benefiting the community in any way that is readily apparent. Who is benefiting from this prolonged, mind-numbing Union activity?

P. Compton,
Pacific Grove

"Carmel Legends"

What is a "legend"? Mr. Webster says, "It's a story or group of stories, handed down for generations...believed to have a historical basis, but not verifiable." That's good enough, and gives us a lot of latitude. Carmel is a fountain of legends. Legends of people, of places, of events that may or may not have happened exactly as we relate them. Over the next few weeks, and hopefully years, we will be documenting legends of Carmel. You will hear about special people who lived here and placed their stamp on this unique village. You'll hear about the houses they lived in, the special atmosphere they created, the inventive ways in which they made their nests. You'll hear about the unorthodox things they did, the brave ventures they undertook, the stupid losses and the exciting victories. In its relatively short history, less than 100 years, Carmel has contributed more than its share to the lore of our country. We think you'll enjoy this space each week. But we warn you: don't believe everything you read.

The dog had no tags and was not chipped, and the RP did not know whom the dog belonged to. The dog was placed in a kennel until the owner could be located.
